Text (B)

It's true that as we grow older , it becomes harder to remember things as quickly as we used to . But there are many techniques we can use to memorise names and numbers such as acronyms , association , acrostics and chunking . Acronyms are words or phrases made from the initial letters of other words . BBC, for example , stands for the British Broadcasting Corporation . Association also helps us memorise names . When you meet someone called Mike , for example , try to visualise a microphone to remember his name . The next time you meet him , you'll immediately think of a microphone .
